DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments filed 8/21/07 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. With respect to the display of thermal information on the image, Kuth et al. teach producing an image to produce a temperature difference which is visible in an image. The image production means enable determination of the position of the temperature change (col. 4 lines 45-63, claims 20-24). Therefore this clearly teaches generating a display of thermal information indicative of relative magnitudes of temperature change at various locations through a tissue region. The previous rejection is maintained and repeated below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

1. Claims 1, 9, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kuth et al. (5944663). Kuth et al. disclose a system and method for monitoring thermal treatment of a tissue regions of interest within a patient by obtaining x-ray images with image values corresponding with an array of spatial locations throughout the tissue region of interest (col. 2 lines 32-53). Kuth et al. teach monitoring temperature changes of a tissue region of interest by obtaining different set of x-ray images of the region of interest to note any changes (col. 4 lines 5-20 lines 45-57). Kuth et al. teach spatially displaying the thermal information for the array of spatial locations where the relative magnitudes of temperature changes throughout the tissue region of interest are visually distinct (col. 4 lines 45 – col. 5 line 13).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 2-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kuth et al. in view of Badger et al. Kuth et al. teach displaying the temperature changes by using different symbols (col. 10 lines 58 – col. 11 line 3) but do not teach using different colors to represent different relative magnitudes of temperature changes. Badger et al. teach amplifying a region of interest of the thermal information using different colors (col. 3 lines 27-33, col. 9 lines 13-60). The reference teaches display of multiple ranges of temperatures as a function of treatment time (col. 3 lines 34-53, fig. 5, 6). It would have therefore been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use the teaching by Badger et al. to modify the teaching by Kuth et al. for the purpose of effectively analyzing changes in temperature in various tissue regions (col. 12 lines 49-52).

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
